Respond

Taking Responsibility For Your Financial Results

Part of being an adult is being responsible for ourselves; our actions = our results.

Think about your own financial circumstances at this time – you may not have actively sought your current financial reality, however through your decision making you did play a part in the outcome.

Own your outcomes. Being present gives you the power to respond.

Taking responsibility is about owning our outcomes; it is about being present in our lives. Being present gives us the power to respond ... respond rather than react.

When times are financially challenging, responding gives you the opportunity to move towards options and choices and this is more empowering than taking the victim stance.

If money is tight right now note – it is not forever – it is a moment in the timeline of your life and it may even have a teaching/learning gift.

Take Responsibility and frame it in a way that will serve you.

It's Not a Dress Rehearsal

Play your role in life by participating actively and accepting responsibility for the results you achieve; know that you are capable of making the changes that are necessary

REMEMBER – any given moment in time is an Act in a Scene in the Drama of Life – it isn't a dictation of the entire Production and it doesn't have to be the Final Scene – it is largely your choice how the Drama ends.
